NutraFlora® Prebiotic Fiber is Approved for Use in Organic Products
GTC Nutrition Manufactures the Only North American-Produced Prebiotic Fiber Included on the National List

GOLDEN, Colo. (April 3, 2007) – GTC Nutrition, a business unit of Corn Products International, Inc., today announced that its flagship ingredient solution, NutraFlora® short-chain fructooligosaccharides (scFOS®), was approved by the National Organic Standards Board (NOSB) at its March 2007 meeting to be included on the National List of non-organically produced ingredients that are allowed to be used in organic products. NutraFlora is the only North American-produced prebiotic fiber on this list.

All agricultural, non-organically produced ingredients that will be used in organic food, beverage and supplement formulations are required to be approved by the NOSB on or before June 9, 2007. The NOSB board meeting in Washington, D.C. March 27-29 was held, in part, to review petitioned ingredients seeking such approval prior to this deadline.

“We are extremely pleased to receive this recognition and approval by the NOSB, which further illustrates NutraFlora’s ability to improve the wellbeing of today’s consumers,” said Patrick Smith, president of GTC Nutrition. “We commend our manufacturing partners and the industry as a whole for coming together in support of the value of the prebiotics category and look forward to future innovations for NutraFlora use in organic applications.”

For more than 20 years, GTC Nutrition has been marketing NutraFlora prebiotic fiber as an ingredient solution that is uniquely capable of helping to improve calcium absorption as well as digestive and immune health. The company maintains a consumer outreach and education program to increase brand awareness for prebiotics and empower consumers to make “better for you” diet choices, to include products enriched with NutraFlora® prebiotic fiber such as Horizon Organic® yogurts and fruit smoothies.
